It is only in recent years that this has been true, that the man of constructive ability follows on for the purpose of crystalizing the fervor of the apostle.

Arbitration is one of the most modern of thoughts. It belongs essentially to this century. Arbitration for many, many years has failed to get the approval of conferences because the approval of conferences because the first is efforts to settle controversies between nations have been conducted upon an entirely different plane than that of the individual. There has ever been a reluctance to acknowledge the aposple. The use that diplomacy has been put to and the deceits practice.

Mr. Meredith went in much detail concerning the making and breaking of treaties and agreements between nations. He quoted from the decisions of great tribunals and the opinions of some of the greatest thinkers of all time. The question to-day is to suffi-ciently arouse the people of the world for the ratification of these present day treaties and the adoption of in-ternational arbitration, thus putting to an end forever the dreadful carnage of war and destruction. Its purpose is to promote the general cause of peace throughout the world.

He asked that his audience would not forwar that a not forget that a treaty, to be worth anything, must be observed as well as made. The moral force of the community must be behind it. The United States has had a large share in this movement and no other country has such a record for the way of the states. such a record for the use of the treaty In conclusion, he said that what one has to fight in the establishment of arbitration is the weakness of errors of humanity, hatred and the lust of conquest. We must have self control; that is the doctrine that must be inculcated in the nation. No one can read history without seeing the march of this idea through the pages of it all and in the authority of the lawyers of antiquity. It has taken man out of the reign of brutality and given him a reign of justice and rational out of the reign of brutality and given him a reign of justice and rational judgment. Other nations would follow the lead of this country, and it is from the collective authority of the world that one can hope for an entire disarmament and a world at peace. At least, this age shall deserve well of posterity and though the windows look toward the West and the sun is not yet flooding them, still the sky is light. It was a masterly lecture, delivered by a master mind, and the audience gathered at the club was most enthusiastic in its reception of the speaker.

Popular Prince Vincent Windisch-Graetz Blows Out His Own Brains.

PRINCE VINCENT WINDISCH-GRAETZ, who has just blown out his brains at Rome, where he was serving as a secretary to the Augtrian embassy to the Quirinal, spent a couple of years in this country as attache of the Austrian embassy at Washington, under Baron Hengelmuller, and made many friends by his modesty, boyishness, and absolute modesty, boyishness, and absolute freedom from all pose and affectation. Although his name appears in the cur-rent Issue of the Almanach de Gotha as a bachelor, he was married in November last to Princess "Lotti" Fuers-tenberg at Donaueschingen, the ancestral home, in the Grand Duchy Baden, of her father, Prince Maximilian Puerstenberg, so well known in onnection with his intimacy with the stant associate he is.

Both Emperor William and Arch-duke Francis Fordinand, the next heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary, were present at the wedding, which was made the occasion of all sorts of named because it is from a spring in the courtyard of the palace, indicated by an exquisite piece of marble statuary by the famous sculptor Herr, and surrounded by a large balustrade of marble, that the mighty River Danube

Good looking, richpossessed of high rank, and enjoying the particular favor of the reigning houses of Austria and of Hohenzollern, it seemed at the time of their marricloud to the happiness of the young couple, and it is difficult to conceive what possible reason Prince Vincent could, therefore, have had for taking his own life at Rome.

Young Prince Vincent held a comteenth Regiment of Austrian Dragoons, was a promising member of the diplo-matic service, and spent some time by a bank at Dresden, for the purpose of becoming sufficiently acquainted with inancial and business matters to enable him to administer on his father's death the great property and extensive interests of the Windisch-Graetz
